
RECAP: What if God still speaks hope into broken places? What if the dream you buried wasn't dead—just waiting? Explore how God speaks through dreams and visions to awaken hope, restore what's been lost, and invite His people to build a better future together.

MAIN POINTS

- God sees an army where we see a graveyard. When we look at broken relationships, lost dreams, or overwhelming challenges, we often see only what used to be or what feels dead. God sees the potential for new life, transformation, and victory where human effort sees absolute impossibility.
- Faith speaks God's promises rather than just describing the problem. We are often experts at detailing our dry bones, listing every reason why a situation cannot change. True faith does not deny reality, but it refuses to believe that visible circumstances are the only reality that exists.
- Structure without the Spirit has no true life. You can have all the right pieces, systems, and appearances in place, just as the skeletons in Ezekiel's vision received flesh and skin, yet still be out of breath inside. True life comes only when the Holy Spirit breathes into our souls, turning empty containers into vibrant movement.

GETTING STARTED

- Have you ever looked at a situation in your life (a relationship, a career path, or a personal struggle) and concluded that it was completely finished? How do you typically react when forced to face something that feels entirely beyond your control?

SCRIPTURE

- Ezekiel 37:1-14; Psalm 126:1-3

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

- Read Ezekiel 37:1-3. Why is it often healthiest to admit our own lack of answers while acknowledging that God holds the outcome?
- In Ezekiel 37:4-6, God commands Ezekiel to speak His word directly to the dry bones. What is the difference between rehearsing our problems and actively declaring God's promises over our daily lives?
- You can have all the right structures in place (flesh and skin) yet still lack breath. How can we discern when we are simply going through religious motions versus living in the active breath and power of the Holy Spirit?

APPLICATION

- Identify your dry valley: Bring one area of your life that feels exhausted, dead, or stagnant before God this week. Pray Ezekiel's prayer of trust: "Lord, I do not know how this can change, but You know."
- Shift your declaration: Notice throughout the week when you start listing all the reasons why a hard situation will never improve. Consciously stop talking about the difficulty and begin praying Scripture and God's promises over that area instead.
- Seek fresh breath over mere appearance: If you feel like you have been going through the motions spiritually, set aside time for quiet prayer without an agenda, asking the Holy Spirit to breathe fresh joy, passion, and purpose back into your soul.
