ELLEN STUMBO

Ellen Stumbo is the founder of Disability Matters, an organization with the mission to encourage every church to embrace disability. She is a writer and national speaker. She also works for The Mighty as the Parenting Editor. Ellen often speaks and writes on issues related to church, disability and raising children with disabilities. She writes the disability column for Group's Children's Ministry magazine. She has contributed to a few book anthologies, the SpiritLed Women's Bible and writes for several online publications. You can visit Ellen's blog at ellenstumbo.com and learn more about Disability Matter at whydisabilitymatters.org.

SARA BOHRER

Sara is in her tenth year of teaching, her fourth at Century High School. She taught in the elementary for her first six years and four years ago moved to the high school where she still teaches. Four years ago Sara started the Peer to Peer Leadership class at Century High School. She has been a Young Life Leader for the last 12 years while she has loved being able to foster high school students relationships with Christ. She acquired her Bachelor of Arts degree in the areas of Physical Education, Special Education, as well as a coaching minor from the University of Mary.

CHARLES THOMAS

Charles is the Chief Operations Officer at Omnipoint Technology, Inc. and the CEO of Central Virginia Public Access Television. Since 2001 he has worked as a lay person at Mount Ararat Church Access Ministry. In 2009 Charles became the lead for the Adult Access Ministry at Mount Ararat Church and is an onstage actor for the Children Ministry there as well.

NATALIE MAXWELL

Natalie Maxwell resides in Mandan, ND with her husband Ryan and their 5 children, 3 of whom they adopted from Ukraine. She writes and speaks on the topics of women's ministry, adoption, special needs advocacy, and entrepreneurship. She has had articles featured by focus on the Family, but you can mostly find her sharing about the beautiful messiness of life over on instagram @nnmaxwell
