Introduction

This lesson is not about rebellion — it is about impatience

When G-d has spoken, delay tests trust

Most believers do not abandon faith — they adjust it

Blessing does not automatically mean approval

Introduction

This lesson is about impatience,
not rebellion

Delay tests trust when G-d has already spoken

Most believers compromise while waiting

Blessing does not automatically mean approval

POINT ONE: When the Promise Is Clear but the Wait Is Hard

Genesis 16 — the promise was already spoken

Sarah interpreted delay instead of waiting on G-d

The alternative looked practical, not sinful

Impatience produced a substitute

Point One
— What
This Teaches Us

Delay is one of the greatest tests of trust

Alternatives are born when waiting becomes uncomfortable

Most spiritual compromise begins with impatience

POINT
TWO:
Blessing
Is Real,
but Covenant Is Specific

Genesis 17 — Ishmael was blessed, Isaac carried covenant

Blessing answers: Can this live?

Covenant answers: What is this for?

Blessing sustains life; covenant
advances redemption

Point Two

Covenant Logic

Blessing can be broad;
covenant is precise

Growth does not equal authorization

Redemption advances through what G-d has spoken

POINT THREE:
G-d's Faithfulness Is Not His Approval

G-d remained faithful to Abraham

He did not revise covenant to include Ishmael

Providence governs outcomes without excusing choices

Providence Explained

Providence is not approval of every decision

Providence governs
outcomes, not choices

G-d redeems situations
He did not initiate

Sovereignty does not erase accountability

Three Things G-d
Shows Us
About Himself

Faithful even when we fail

Careful with what He promised

Committed to His choice
