Philip and Peggy Johnson, both natives of North Carolina, served as missionaries with the International Mission Board for 15 years, ministering in Honduras, El Salvador, and Uruguay.

Philip worked in a variety of settings—from ministering to cancer patients and staff at the largest Maternity Hospital in San Salvador to planting a house church in a small beach town on the southern coast of Uruguay. Peggy taught adult English conversation classes, volunteered as a choral teacher, and served as a hostess for many afternoon teas (all while parenting two young boys).

They returned to the US in 2012, after which Philip began a career in Hospital Chaplaincy and Peggy became a public school Spanish teacher. Their work took them to southeastern Kentucky, at the edge of Appalachia. They retired three years ago and settled in High Point, NC, near family. Their two sons are now grown and married, one in Chicago and the other in Eden, NC. The Johnsons are the proud grandparents of a 4-month old boy named Miles.
