Life Change: We live by God's values

Various places have values

In Christ's universal church, we:

Rom 12:9-10

Value sincere love

Detest evil

Cling to good

A child who constructs an adult identity while drawing from a stable and time-tested set of values, beliefs, and stories, given to her by trusted adults within a religious or philosophical tradition, will fare far better than a child who attempts to construct an adult identity by herself while drawing from a billion pieces of short and ephemeral content, produced mostly by young people and bots, which cannot be assembled into a coherent worldview. – Jonathan Haidt, “The Devil’s Plan to Ruin the Next Generation”

Love one another deeply as siblings

Honor others first

The Bible on value:

- Humans are valued by God.
- Those who trust Him develop certain values.

- That allows them to create value.

A Christian is automatically incorporated into the universal body of Christ (what our ancestors called “the invisible Church”). As with any place of belonging, there are certain values indicative of The Church. These are not legalisms, but rather character qualities rooted in God’s eternal and good character. The scripture reveals these values and impresses upon us the importance of living accordingly for optimum flourishing.

V = value
P = price

$$\frac{V}{P} \geq 1 \text{ (yes)}$$

$$\frac{V}{P} < 1 \text{ (no)}$$

Heartsill Wilson's value formula

The cross appears to be a negative proposition.

There is nothing more precious than God, so a drop of His blood is an unthinkably high price.

$$\frac{V}{p} \geq 1_{(\text{yes})}$$

$$\frac{v}{P} < 1_{(\text{no})}$$

God declares that the cross is actually a positive formula. God
sees the value
of saving a person as
worth the price
He pays.

$$\frac{V}{p} \geq 1 \text{ (yes)}$$

$$\frac{v}{P} < 1 \text{ (no)}$$

$$\infty \frac{V}{P} < 1_{(no)}$$

1 Corinthians 6:20 says “we were bought with a price.” Since that price was Christ himself, we can assign P the value of infinity to represent Jesus’ inestimable worth. But if the denominator P is infinity, the equation will never be positive. The result will never be equal to or greater than 1.

– Michael Berry

$$\frac{\infty^V}{\infty^P} \geq 1(\text{yes})$$

1 Corinthians 6:20 says “we were bought with a price. Since that price was Christ himself, we can assign P the value of infinity to represent Jesus’ inestimable worth. But if the denominator P is infinity, the equation will never be satisfied. The result will never be equal to or greater than 1. Unless...the numerator is also raised to infinity. That value change can only occur if something external raises the worth of V infinitely. – Michael Berry

$$\frac{\infty^V}{\infty^p} \geq 1_{(\text{yes})}$$

Encourage digital substitutes for friendship, love, and intimacy. People will accumulate “connections” while feeling lonelier than ever. Some of the activities that are known to strengthen bonds, such as physical touch, sharing a meal, and synchronous movement, are impossible online. But don't worry! The tech industry has a cure for the diseases it causes. As Mark Zuckerberg explained, the average American has fewer than three friends but wants 15. Meta's AI companions will fill that gap! And it's not just for friends. Meta's AIs were specifically permitted to engage in "sensual conversations" with children, according to a leaked internal policy memo that was approved by Meta's full leadership. – Jonathan Haidt, "The Devil's Plan to Ruin the Next Generation"

He is far away from scripture in many ways, especially his hatred of Jews; yet thousands of Christians follow him. Why?

Formation requires relationship, time, and community. You can't form someone by calling them racist online. You form them in parishes, in friendships, in accountability. The reason Fuentes has influence is that the Church abandoned its job. We stopped forming young men. We stopped teaching virtue. We stopped offering them something worth living for, so they went looking elsewhere. [One] cannot defeat bad ideas with moral smugness [or] by borrowing secular "morality." Bad ideas are not defeated by better ideas, as the old liberal adage claims. Bad ideas are defeated by truth spoken in love. – Pat Neve, "Why Piers Morgan Couldn't Beat Nick Fuentes"

<sup>9</sup> Let love be without hypocrisy. Detest evil; cling to what is good. <sup>10</sup> Love one another deeply as brothers and sisters. Take the lead in honoring one another.

Romans 12 CSB

There is a natural path to success, Aaron. But you're too angry and bitter to follow it. You just flail around stubbornly in the brush alongside it, angry with the world for not making the path exactly where you wish to walk.
– Lisa McMann, *Island of Silence

Technology makes backing out frictionless. And that, I think, is what's made me reconsider my position on canceled plans. The ease with which we can back out via text renders every plan a phantom. It makes it possible, whether we mean it or not, to treat our relationships with a lack of commitment. And, crucially, easy asynchronous communication allows us to be careless with other people's time. My friend Indrani pointed out how she bristles when someone cancels plans by saying, "I'm freeing up your evening!" as if assuming she had other options when she was truly looking forward to seeing them.

Brad Stulberg wrote a lovely guest essay for Times Opinion a couple of years ago about the importance of showing up, even if it's a drag. The ultimate goal in keeping plans, he says, is creating community — a necessary component, we're reminded over and over, to happiness and longevity. This may involve giving up some control of our time in the short term in the interest of giving our lives meaning in the long run.

Making plans and then actually showing up, even if we're spent or cranky, is a simple way of acting with integrity. There's so much that's unsteady in the world, so much that feels inconstant. Being a dependable presence, keeping our word and our plans, is a small but indisputable way of resisting that. – Melissa Kirsch, "Following Through" in NYTimes October 12, 2025

Aristotle famously depicted virtues as a golden mean between a misunderstood excess and deficiency of a quality. Of course, his idea does not carry the weight of scripture, but it had huge sway among our forebears in the Church.

Evil consists in discordance from their rule or measure. Now this may happen either by their exceeding the measure or by their falling short of it...Therefore it is evident that moral virtue observes the mean.
– Summa Theologica, Question 64 of the Prima Secundæ

Issue: sincere love requires unhypocritical sacrifice.

Deficiency: smarminess; sarcasm; closed-off

Sincerity: agape

Misunderstood excess: fake it until you make it; forced affection

Place a mark where you appear to operate most of the time.

Deficiency	Virtuous agape	Excess
------------	----------------	--------

Issue: detesting evil requires obedience.

Deficiency: Little Red disobeyed & left the path to Grandma's

Detesting evil: shuddering at evil inside and outside self

Misunderstood excess: withdrawal; refusing to leave home

Place a mark where you appear to operate most of the time.

Deficiency

Virtuous obedience

Excess

---

Issue: clinging to what is good requires knowing right from wrong.

Deficiency: right as determined by culture and/or self

Clinging to good: dedicated to goodness by God’s grace

Misunderstood excess: self-righteous judgment re: others’ ways of clinging

Place a mark where you appear to operate most of the time.

Deficiency

Goodness by grace

Excess

Issue: loving deeply requires commitment.

Deficiency: commitment limited to what I get from the family

Commitment: engaged and embracing family bonds despite pains

Misunderstood excess: controlling; co-dependent

Place a mark where you appear to operate most of the time.

Deficiency

Virtuous commitment

---

Issue: honoring others requires humility.

- Deficiency:* jealous or blind to the merits of others; busy building self
- Humility:* accurate & stable recognition of value in Christ; know own gifts & flaws
- Misunderstood excess:* absorbed with comparison; derailed by failings

Place a mark where you appear to operate most of the time.

Deficiency	Virtuous humility	Excess

Aristotle argued that happiness is attained by action in accord with virtue. While the empirical study of virtues is relatively new, there is now reasonably good evidence that the exercise of virtue does indeed, perhaps unsurprisingly, contribute to greater happiness. – Tyler J.
