

The Ripple Effect

Make Big Waves.

Love others the way God loves you.

Discussion Questions: Read the parable of the Good Samaritan in Luke 10:25-37.

- 1.) Jesus invites us to love others the way God loves us. Sometimes loving others is easy, but sometimes loving another person is hard. Think of a time loving another person was difficult. What happened? How did you try and love them like God loves you?
- 2.) What if loving one another means listening without judgment, offering a hug, and praying for the person? Is this different than what you think of when you imagine loving another person? Why or why not?
- 3.) If God wants the love of Jesus to change how we think and act, how does that change how we live each day?

A quote to reflect on by Dave Adamson from page 77 in his book MetaChurch:

"A disciple of Jesus is someone who reflects Jesus. This means, if you say you follow Jesus, everything you do today--every word and action, the way you drive, the way you respond to people at work, school, or the store, your attitude, and every social media post--should reflect Jesus. In my opinion, no one sums this up better than New York Times best-selling author Bob Goff, who says, 'The best way to show people that God is everything we say He is, is for us to be everything He says we are.'"
