

Discussion Questions for 2015 Spring Practitioners Event

“Creating Your Missiology” | Kim Cecil

- Have you spent time developing your own missiology? If so, what is it? If not, what will you do to begin this process?
- How can you explain the WHY behind missions to your students?
- How can we practically help students discover their own missiology?
- Is prayer a high priority in your effort to help students become missional minded? Do you model this?
- Does your group give to a regular missions project?
- Do you have a three-year missions opportunity plan for your NextGen ministry? Local? Urban? Across national borders?

“Developing A Global Mindset” | Bob & Ann Epperson

- Is developing a global mindset important in your local NextGen ministry context?
- Are there exemptions to the global call of ministry? Are ALL called to this?
- Evaluate yourself -- have you chosen one section of geography at the expense of another? Or how are you balancing Jerusalem and Judea and Samaria and the world

“Bringing Out The Missions Call In Your Students” | Paul Greer

- What might be some ideas we could give students to live unselfishly now to prepare for a missions calling?
- What students can you identify who seems to have a missions calling?
- How can we connect with short-term trips that Foursquare offers? Where's the best place to get started?
- In what ways are you teaching your students to love people “eternally”?
- What cross-cultural ministry experiences are you offering your students?

“The Art of Neighboring” | Lance Ford

- What does “loving your neighbor” look like for teenagers?
- Would you consider making a hallway locker or classroom chart grid for students to learn names of those that “neighbor” them in school?
- Think back over the last hour or two - who have you glanced over versus really seeing.
- What's one way you can bring Heaven on earth to your neighborhood --- even something small?
- What can we do as NextGen pastors to inspire the neighboring missionary spirit in our students?
