

Galatians: Restoring One Another - Galatians 6:1-5

Memory Verse: Galatians 6:2 “Bear one another’s burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ.”

1. When you hear that another believer has fallen into sin, what is your first inward response? What might that response reveal about how you understand your own need for grace?

2. The sermon challenged us to distinguish actual sin from something we simply dislike. When has a personal preference affected how you judged another believer? How can you approach those differences with greater humility?

3. Think about a time someone corrected you. What about their approach helped you listen, or made you defensive? How could that experience shape the way you speak truth with gentleness?

4. Paul tells those pursuing restoration to keep watch on themselves. Where might you be overconfident about your own resistance to temptation? What would humble watchfulness look like in that area?

5. Whose burden have you noticed recently, and what has kept you from coming alongside them? What specific, practical help could you offer this week?

6. How easy is it for you to admit you are struggling and receive help? What would help our group become a place where people can be honest, receive grace, and take responsibility for their next steps?

7. Is there someone whose failure has led you to gossip, withdraw, or feel superior? What would a step toward their restoration look like for you, while respecting appropriate boundaries, accountability, and consequences?
