

How does the biblical definition of marriage as between one man and one woman challenge or align with modern cultural views, and what implications does this have for Christians today?

In what ways can couples cultivate a 'unified spirit of serving and following and trusting God' in their marriage, and how might this impact their relationship?

How do you interpret Paul's teaching on headship in 1 Corinthians 11, and what does this mean for equality and roles within a Christian marriage?

What are some practical ways that married couples can protect and nurture their 'sexual spark' while also growing in spiritual intimacy?

How does the concept of becoming 'one flesh' in marriage reflect the relationship between Christ and the church, and what can we learn from this parallel?

In what ways can submission in marriage be a positive response, and how does this differ from cultural misconceptions about submission?

How can couples balance individual uniqueness with unity in decision-making and child-rearing within a biblical framework of marriage?

What are some challenges and opportunities in maintaining a biblical view of marriage in a society where marriage rates are declining and alternative arrangements are becoming more common?

How can unmarried individuals or those in non-traditional relationships engage with and apply biblical teachings on marriage in their own lives and faith journeys?

In what ways can the church better support and strengthen marriages according to biblical principles while also showing love and compassion to those in different life situations?