SERMON SUMMARY

Last Sunday we looked at the twin parables of the hidden treasure and the pearl. Here are three big ideas we can glean from the parables:

- The Kingdom of God is a treasure waiting to be discovered: it can be found incidentally like the man in the field who found the treasure; or intentionally like the merchant in the market who found the fine pearl.
- The Kingdom of God is risky business: it costs us nothing and everything all at the same time.
- The Kingdom of God captivates like no other: that is why it is truly worth more than anything else and why we can joyfully desire or deliberately choose it above all else.

What was your discovery of the Kingdom of God like? Was it incidental or intentional?

- What risks have you encountered in your pursuit of the Kingdom of God?
- What led you to be able to take those risks?
- What do you find captivating about the Kingdom of God and Jesus?
