1) Joshua declared "as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord" with boldness and certainty. What does it look like in practical terms for a household today to make this same declaration, and what challenges might prevent families from doing so?

2) Sherrill shares how his father insisted he attend church at age 14, which ultimately led to his salvation at 15. How do we balance parental authority in spiritual matters with allowing children to develop their own genuine faith?

3) The sermon stresses that being a godly parent is more important than any career or vocation. In our achievement-oriented culture, how do we practically prioritize family discipleship over professional success?

4) The pastor mentions that Christians are called to set an example every day, not just on Sunday. What are the most challenging areas of daily life where your Christian witness is tested, and how can you be more consistent?

5) The message emphasizes walking in your house with a perfect heart and setting no wicked thing before your eyes. In an age of constant media and digital access, how do families practically guard what enters their homes and influences their children?
