1st Corinthians 12:20-30

Every part of the body of Christ brings equal and important value to the church. Paul reinforces this truth to those who may try to flex their spiritual gifting.

How would you describe the posture that you exhibit when you consider your spiritual gifting? How do you view others who may be gifted differently?

Have you ever found yourself walking in pride when the gifts that you exercise seem more impressive than others? Have you walked in insecurity when your gifting has seemed less impressive than others?

Every person in faith has a gifting that is unique to them, but empowered by the Holy Spirit the same way as everybody else.

Can you consider different institutions that have people of different responsibility levels? How are they all needed to keep the institution moving forward?

How is church culture upside down compared to modern secular culture in regards to individualism versus complementary interdependence? How is Christ our example?

Do you find it challenging to depend on others? Why or why not? Do you embrace your responsibility of others depending on you?
