

Stories are a big part of Christmas. They are break from reality and a change from the mundane of the everyday. We all have favorite Christmas stories; books, movies, or TV shows. However, the most important story worth knowing is the gospel, about the Son of God that came to earth to provide salvation for all who believe! It's a story worth sharing, and a story worth celebrating!

Storytelling is our obligation to the next generation. If all we are doing is marketing, we are doing a disservice, and not only to our profession, but to our children, and their children. Give something of meaning to your audience by inspiring, engaging, and educating them with story. Stop marketing. Start storytelling. - Laura Holloway
