Jordana Gerbrandt - YWAM Update

I want to inform the church of some big changes happening for me and I have some exciting news to share as well! This coming September I have the opportunity to go to Paris, France to attend a seminar called Heaven for Creatives! The focus of the seminar is to equip and champion creatives to activate their God-given dreams with a missional focus. We will be learning more on how to co-create with God and discover how our talents and passions can be used to influence the world. I'm excited to see what God has for me during this seminar and how it will prepare me for what's to come. The seminar runs from September 4-23. Following the seminar I have the opportunity to stay for an extra week and help with a fashion show during Paris Fashion week! I'm really excited for this seminar as my DTS school leader is the one running it and we have dreamed of me visiting her in Paris one day for a couple years now.

Following my time in Paris I will be returning home to spend some much needed time with family and friends! I have decided that prior to leaving for Paris I will be ending my time at YWAM LA effective at the end of August. This was a very difficult decision to make and I wasn't expecting it right now, but looking back over the past few months I can see how God has been preparing me for this. I don't know where God is going to lead me after this, but this year I have learned how to trust God on a deeper level than ever before and I trust that in his time he will reveal more to me of where I will be going in the future. I am open to the possibility of returning to YWAM LA one day, but for now I feel that I need to spend an extended season at home. If you want to hear the story of how I got to make this decision I would love to share more!
