

Missions Annie Armstrong Missions

When Rony came to America, his worldly possessions fit inside one tiny carry-on. “I left everything,” he said, “in Venezuela.”

When Elizabeth had her third abortion, she felt like she’d hit rock bottom. “I felt so disgusting,” she said, “and so alone.”

When Maki made it big as a professional fighter, he let a lie become his mantra. “God will never love a person,” he said, “like me.”

Rony, Elizabeth and Maki are remarkable because they are common. In what is perhaps the most technologically advanced and seemingly gospel-saturated continent on earth, how is it that there are hundreds of millions of more people just like them? How is it that in communities all over North America, Jesus is not known?

Rony didn’t speak English. Elizabeth had no Christian friends. Maki wholeheartedly embraced the world’s view of who God is.

Rony, Elizabeth and Maki are North America’s modern-day everyman and everywoman. And because they are among us, North American missionaries are called to go to them and make Jesus known.

Prayer Concerns from the Congregation

Government Leaders

- For the president and his advisors to have God’s blessing on their lives as they have been elected to lead us.
- For the Lord to work out His purposes in the U.S. presidential election cycle this year .

"Christ in Me Changes Me "

Colossians 3:1-11

As believers we must embrace and live out our new identity in Jesus Christ, having been transferred from the domain of darkness into the Kingdom of light. To do that we must understand that identity includes a change of citizenship which ought to change our culture.

Introduction

1. Prioritize your new citizenship (Colossians 3:1-2)

2. Die to the Old, Live to the New (Colossians 3:3-10)

3. Embrace Unity in our Diversity (Colossians 3:11)

There is a transformative power to fit in to our new citizenship when we set our sights on things above and live out our new identity in Christ.

*What can you do this week to look more like a native citizen of Heaven?
Focus your attention on God's character and promises!*
