Focus

If it were within your ability, who would you bless and how would you make it an over-the-top expression of your appreciation?

When we give generously and learn to manage what God has given us well, we begin experiencing life beyond blessed. When we follow this plan, we are using God's resources properly. He wants to bless us by channeling His resources through us to bless others.

Review

Key Scriptures: Genesis 12:2; 1 Chronicles 4:9–10

The Blessed Life is comprised of two components: generosity and stewardship. When we are obedient to His Word, we want to bless others because God has blessed us. He has the supply to answer our need.

God does not need our money because He owns everything. All we have is due to His graciousness. We are the stewards of what He has directed to us, and our heart attitude determines what we do with it. Giving is a blessing!

Because God loves us, He blesses us. When we are generous to others and are good stewards of what He gives us, He opens the windows of heaven and pours out blessings upon us. God implemented giving for a purpose—to be a blessing to others and to bless us.

Discussion Questions

1. What are two important components to not only living the blessed life but also living beyond blessed?
2. "We get to give, not give to get" is the proper attitude to have when giving. It is realizing that God gives us opportunities and circumstances in which to bless others. How is this concept of giving improperly used at times?
3. Being a good steward means that we manage well all that God gives us. What can happen when we are not careful in managing these blessings?
4. Explain this verse, "For where your treasure is, there your heart will be also" (Matthew 6:21). Give examples of how this verse could apply positively or negatively.
5. Read 1 Chronicles 4:10. What are the requests Jabez brings before God? How does God respond? Discuss ways we can apply the prayer of Jabez to our lives today.
6. To fully walk in God's blessings, we must learn to operate generously and to manage our resources wisely. Take a moment to quietly come before the Lord, asking Him if there needs to be a change in your attitude about giving and stewardship. Then ask Him to help you follow through with what you have been shown.
