

JULY 3

OLYMPIC NATIONAL PARK (WASHINGTON)

Olympic National Park is home to a high concentration of exceedingly diverse life living interdependently, resulting in a place of unrivaled beauty. To see all of this is to come face-to-face with the knowledge that life itself is a gift and that our own lives are connected in some marvelous and mysterious way to all other life on earth. What does it mean for us that God intended for us to live in ways that depend on and receive life from one another? How does that call us to live with one another and with creation?

NOTES, REFLECTIONS, PRAYERS

READ

Psalm 33:6-9

Romans 12:3-8

REFLECT

When have you thought about your life as a gift?

In what ways might you express gratitude for this gift?

What are gifts you see in others that you admire?

PRAY

Thank you, God of Grace, for all that you have given me. Help me to see you in others and in the world around me. Make me mindful this week of the many gifts in my world all around me. Unite me in love with your people and your creation. Amen.
