

Be Brave

Today's project may seem similar to last week's. That's because it is building from what we did last week. The goal for today, however, is to be a little more open and vulnerable with your answers, than the simple answers for "get to know you" type questions like last week. This week we REALLY want to know you, so try to give your answers a little more thought.

The purpose for this practice is, we need to learn how to share and be vulnerable with others. We do so here, together, so that we are in a more comfortable environment, as we prepare to do so with complete strangers. Evangelism is always relational. Why? Because how can you truly share the Gospel with someone, on a meaningful level, without forming a relationship, and being prepared to discuss whatever topic they may bring up?

What was your most memorable birthday gift or surprise?
What was your first Job?
What song reminds you of your childhood?
Is there a place where you're a regular customer? Where?
What is something you're not good at?
What's something you're weirdly good at?
What's your creative outlet? Why?
What is something new you would like to learn about or deepen your knowledge in? Why?
What is something you know now that you wish you knew when you were younger? Why?

What does it take for you to trust someone? Why?
What does being happy mean to you? Why?
How has your relationship with God evolved throughout your life through today?

Bonus***

Give an example of a time you felt undervalued
Give an example of a time you may have been too critical and harsh towards yourself	