

During our last gathering on International Sunday, we were privileged to have Dave Steadman, the CEO of the African Pastors Fellowship, share with us.

Scripture:

Reflecting on Luke 4:14-30.

Overview:

In our session, we delved into how Jesus carried the nations in his heart. Even when speaking in his hometown, he held a broader perspective. Dave Steadman emphasised that our mission field isn't always in distant lands; sometimes, it's right at our doorsteps. Opportunities to share the message of Jesus with the nations surround us daily. As we explored Jesus' life, we recognised his resilience in the face of hostility and hardship. Like him, we're called to be steadfast in God's mission, even when met with challenges.

An interesting takeaway was how Jesus utilised the technology available to him to connect with those around him. This insight challenges us to embrace and enhance our use of technology, particularly social media, to spread the message of Jesus globally.

Discussion Questions:

1. What opportunities do you currently have to share the message of Jesus with people from different nations?
2. Reflecting on recent experiences, what challenges have you encountered while sharing the gospel, and how can we develop greater resilience in the face of opposition?
3. In what ways do you perceive technology, especially social media, as a means to share the gospel effectively?
