Summary

This sermon draws on the life of Moses, as described in Hebrews 11, to explore what it means to leave a lasting, eternal legacy. The pastor highlights three key characteristics from Moses's life: an eternal identity rooted in belonging to God rather than in worldly titles or positions, an eternal sacrifice that requires a deliberate choice to align with God's purposes over temporary pleasures, and an eternal perspective that keeps the reward of heaven in view when making decisions. The message challenges believers to examine where they are investing their time, resources, and energy, and whether those investments will last beyond this life. Using personal stories, a testimony from a church member about tithing, and examples of local ministry impact, the pastor calls the congregation to a lifestyle of intentional, Spirit-led generosity and sacrifice. The goal is not simply a one-time offering but a life oriented toward eternity and the advancement of God's kingdom.

Intro Prayer

Heavenly Father, we come before You today with open hearts and open hands. As we gather together, we ask that You quiet the noise of our daily lives and help us focus on what truly matters. Speak to us through Your Word and through one another. Give us ears to hear what You want us to receive today, not just what we expect or hope to hear. May this time together draw us closer to You and to each other. In Jesus's name, amen.

Ice Breaker

What is one thing someone did for you, or said to you, that you still think about today because of the lasting impact it had on your life?

Key Verses

- Hebrews 11:24-26
- Romans 8:1
- Psalm 139:10
- 2 Corinthians 8:1-3
- Romans 12:8

Questions

- Moses refused to be identified by his worldly title and instead rooted his identity in belonging to God. How do you tend to define yourself, and how does that compare to how God defines you?
- The pastor described a moment of feeling lost and uncertain about his next step, and then finding comfort in Psalm 139:10. Have you ever experienced a moment where God answered a specific prayer in a personal and unexpected way? What happened?
- Moses chose to endure hardship with God's people rather than enjoy the temporary pleasures of Egypt. What are some 'temporary pleasures' in your own life that might be competing with a deeper commitment to God's purposes?
- The pastor said, 'We don't drift toward legacy. We drift toward easy, toward convenient, toward pleasure.' Do you agree with that? What habits or choices in your life reflect a drift toward convenience rather than intentional sacrifice?
- Brandon's testimony showed that a single conversation about tithing changed the trajectory of his giving two and a half years later. Who has spoken something into your life that shaped how you live today, and have you ever thanked that person?
- The pastor defined generosity as 'holding everything I have in an open hand and being obedient to God's Spirit as He leads me.' How does that definition challenge or encourage your current approach to giving?
- Moses looked to his eternal reward when making decisions, even before Jesus had come to earth. How does keeping eternity in view change the way you approach decisions about your time, money, and relationships?
- The pastor asked, 'Where are you investing, and will it last?' If you honestly evaluated your current investments of time, energy, and money, what would you say is getting the most from you, and does that reflect your eternal values?

Life Application

This week, take 15 to 20 minutes in a quiet place to pray and ask God one specific question: 'Where do You want me to invest my life for eternity?' Then listen. Write down what comes to mind, whether it is joining a small group, serving in a ministry, having a conversation with someone who needs encouragement, or taking a step of faith in your giving. Choose one concrete action from what God shows you and commit to taking that step before the week is over. Legacy is not built in a single moment. It is built one faithful choice at a time.

Key Takeaways

- Moses left a legacy because he had an eternal identity. He refused to let his worth be defined by worldly titles or positions, and instead found his identity in belonging to God. We are called to do the same.
- Moses made an eternal sacrifice by choosing to align with God's people over the temporary pleasures and power that Egypt offered. Leaving a legacy requires a deliberate choice, not a passive drift.
- Moses kept an eternal perspective by looking to his reward rather than making decisions based only on short-term outcomes. Viewing life through the lens of eternity helps us make choices that truly matter.
- Generosity is not about giving to every request but about holding what we have with an open hand and following the Spirit's leading. A lifestyle of Spirit-led giving is one of the most powerful ways to invest in eternity.
- Legacy is not built by accident. Whether through tithing, serving, discipling others, or supporting ministry, every faithful choice we make today has the potential to impact eternity in ways we may never fully see on this side of heaven.

Ending Prayer

Lord, thank You for this time together and for the truth of Your Word. Thank You for the example of Moses, a man who chose You over comfort, who found his identity in You rather than in the world, and who kept his eyes fixed on eternity. We want to be people like that. Help us to see ourselves the way You see us, as Your children, held in Your right hand and led by Your Spirit. Give us the courage to make choices that reflect an eternal perspective, even when those choices are costly or uncertain. May the investments we make with our lives, our time, and our resources point others to Jesus and bear fruit that lasts forever. We trust You with all of it. In Jesus's name, amen.
