Discussion Questions

Analyze these two statements from a biblical lens and explain what they mean:

1. "I am a saint called to be a saint who still sins." and
"I am a sinner saved by grace."
2. How does understanding each statement change your thinking about how you live? What actions might naturally come from each statement? Are there any potential 'land mines' in either?
3. Find Scripture to support your thoughts when you can.

Discussion Questions

Eustace is 42 and has 4 children between the ages of 8 and 17. He has a busy and demanding job but tries to make himself as available as he can when he's home. He's committed to his marriage, his family and to the Lord. At home, however, he often has outbursts of anger. These can be triggered by various things, but he will raise his voice and say unkind things to his wife and his kids. He does seek out his wife and kids later to apologize, but often with an explanation for why he was so angry. His wife once pointed out that there seemed to be a pattern for him that was hard to break. He quickly shut down and said "Look, I've apologized and you've forgiven me. We need to move on. I'm working on it."

Eustace version 2:

Eustace is 42 and has 4 children between the ages of 8 and 17. He has a busy and demanding job but tries to make himself as available as he can when he's home. He's committed to his marriage, his family and to the Lord. At home, however, he often has outbursts of anger. These can be triggered by various things, but he will raise his voice and say unkind things to his wife and his kids. He does seek out his wife and kids later to apologize. He comes to you frustrated and despairing. "I've been working on my anger for so long. I don't understand why God hasn't delivered me from it. Maybe I'm not really saved? Maybe there's something I need to give up? I don't understand why I don't have victory over this."
