“Drawing Wider Circles” Sunday Sermon with David Drumm, LUT, Sunday, Oct. 5, 11 am
CDT

Since at least the time of Aristotle, the circle has been regarded as the perfect geometrical figure and the perfect pattern of motion.

Nicholas of Cusa defined God as "a circle whose center is everywhere and whose circumference is nowhere."

This talk at 11 am on Sunday will examine how the circle functions as a metaphor for health, psychological, spiritual, and social growth and how drawing wider circles brings us into a more fulfilling expression of who we came here to be.
