

The Power of Correction (Prov. 12:1)

Today's leads for leaders is taking from a leadership principal developed by church growth and Leadership specialist Ron Edmondson.

Church growth expert Ron Edmonson writes “No one enjoys hearing they did something wrong, but many leaders view all correction as criticism rather than an opportunity to grow. Growing leaders realize correction helps them improve, so they can do better the next time. (Proverbs 12:1) Sometimes people aren't the best at sharing truth in love, but even in some of those occasions there is something worth hearing. We only know what we know- and sometimes people have to point out what we can't see about ourselves. Ask yourself. Can you receive correction, even when it stings a little to hear, and turn it into something to help you improve as a leader?

Share your reflection on (Proverbs 12:1). What does the word say about us when we refuse to deal with our blind spots?

1

What did the leadership podcast say about overcoming blind spots in our life?

What is one thing you can do this week to be more open to accept correction in your life?

¹ 7 Absolutely Certain Ways to Grow as a Leaders. Ron Edmondson November 21, 2016 Church, Leadership Article