

We all have moments when we wonder, “Am I good enough?” Whether in our work, relationships, or faith, we can easily become trapped in the exhausting pursuit of measuring up. But 2 Corinthians 3 reminds us that our adequacy was never meant to come from ourselves.

Feelings of _____ are not always such a _____ thing.

What makes us adequate is not _____, but the _____ of the gospel.

The old covenant pointed out _____, the new covenant produces _____.

When you put Christ in the middle of any Old Testament passage, it _____.

When you understand that you _____ be good enough and that that’s why Jesus died in your place on the cross, there’s _____.

We are continually being _____ the more and more we fix our eyes on Jesus.
