

Every single person in the Bible we regard as “great” was a man or woman of faith. That faith made a difference in the way they lived and the way they responded to God. That’s why we remember them. Because it’s easy to say we believe, but faith is not an easy thing to put into practice.

- The kind of faith God counts for righteousness has _____ _____ that God will keep his promises.
- There are a couple of ways that Abraham could have _____ _____ to God’s command to sacrifice his son.
 - He could have _____ that it was God who was speaking to him.
 - He could have _____ the command because it didn’t make sense.
- Faith will trust God and leave the “_____” in the hands of Almighty God.
- We must be careful not to put our trust in the _____ God gives us rather than trusting the _____ who gives us those things.

- _____ and _____ are so connected that either one is meaningless without the other.
- When we have _____, do we still _____ the fact that God will keep his word?
