

The One who holds the keys dictates who opens and shuts the doors.

No politician in Washington D.C., no global economic shift, no sickness, and no tragedy holds the keys to human history.

Jesus holds the keys.

He holds the keys to the grave...He holds the keys to your future.

So how do we walk this out this week? I have two challenges for you.

First, change your lens.

Stop reading Revelation with a newspaper in one hand looking for things to be afraid of. If your eschatology makes you anxious, you are doing it wrong. This book was written to suffering people to give them robust, unshakable hope. Read it with a worshipful heart looking for Jesus.

Second, do a "Key Check."

What door in your life are you frantically trying to pry open or hold shut out of fear right now? Is it a fear about your kids? Is it a financial panic? This week, I want you to consciously, out loud, yield that specific situation to the One who actually holds the keys. Stop trying to play God, and let the Ancient of Days hold the keys for you.
