

Here are three invitations as we close this series:

First, bring your broken prayers to God.

Stop trying to pray perfectly. The Spirit intercedes precisely because your prayers are weak. He does not need you to get the words right. He does not need you to feel something. He does not need you to have it all together. Come as you are. Bring your silence. Bring your questions. Bring your anger. Bring your exhaustion. The Spirit can work with all of it.

Second, when you do not know what to pray, pray Romans 8:26.

Lord, I do not know what to pray. But Your Spirit does. I invite Him to pray through me. That is not a cop-out. It is exactly what Paul invites us to do. It is an act of faith to admit your weakness and lean on the Spirit's strength. And let me add this. If you are praying for someone who is far from God, a son, a daughter, a friend, a spouse, do not stop. You do not know what God intends to make of the person you are praying for. Monica prayed for seventeen years. The Spirit has been praying longer, and He never wearies.

Third, leave this series with one commitment.

I will walk with the Spirit. Not perfectly. Not without failure. But daily, dependently, step by step. We have spent thirteen weeks learning who He is. The Helper Jesus promised. The wind and fire of Pentecost. The giver of new birth. The seal of our redemption. The producer of fruit. The distributor of gifts. The author of unity. The one we grieve. The one we follow. And now the one who prays for us when we cannot pray at all. The Promised Presence has been given. The question is not whether the Spirit is with you. The question is whether you are walking with Him. He is here. He is praying. He is groaning on your behalf. And He will not stop until the day of redemption is complete and you are finally, fully home.
