

Broken to Beauty

10/28/26

Rev. Tyler Howell

Luke 7:36-50, Psalm 51:17

- Why do we hide our brokenness?
- Sometimes we hide our brokenness because we're scared to be judged
- We even try to hide our struggles from God
- You don't have to pretend to be whole to come to the One who makes you whole!
- Jesus knows our faults. We can't hide them from Him.
- The one that is forgiven much, loves much
- Your faith makes you whole
- What is your posture? The posture of the pharisee or of the woman with the alabaster box?
- If we're not careful, our position or appearance can sometimes determine our posture
- Don't be more concerned about appearances. Look at the heart
- Sometimes we hide our own brokenness by pointing out someone else's
- DON't fail to recognize your own need for forgiveness
- We hide our struggles because we want people to believe that we have it together. We need God's help!
- God wants us to be honest with Him
- Don't make excuses for sin
- Come to Jesus broken
- Nothing else matters but getting to Christ
- Surrender begins when we stop defending ourselves before God and admit that we need Him
- Humility is very important
- We don't have to pretend that we're strong in God's presence
- Lord, this is where I am. Please meet me here
- Lord, I trust You with my past, my present, and my future
- Our brokenness should not drive us away from Christ, but towards Him
- God is all knowing
