Oh Bogart!

Some mornings are better than others.

Hello family and friends,

My first visit to Queretaro(Ke-re-ta-ro) said in a very rapid cadence, is coming to an end and I will go back to Guadalajara tomorrow for a full Easter weekend. Friday night we will have a worship night at the Pricer's friend Charlotte's house. The last one that I was a part of was heavenly. I'm looking for that this time too!

We will also lead worship for a healing night Saturday night and lead worship for Easter Sunday service. I'm looking forward to it! One thing that I have missed here in Queretaro is the full schedule that I have in Guadalajara, but I've also had more time here to go on long walks and walking Bogart to the park and letting him roam around. He enjoys that a lot. Claudia has also accompanied me on most of my walks and I think we both enjoy getting out in the beautiful weather and having nice talks while we walk.

Speaking of talks, we have learned how to better utilize google translate, I'm becoming more comfortable listening to Spanish and responding in my broken Spanish and they have been working hard to learn English. There has been a lot of communication and relational grace!!!!

Sundays are the days that I struggle the most because church is all Spanish and I'm listening and I'm reading my phone for the translation, so my brain is really challenged and by the end of service I am fatigued. I'm praying that goes away sooner rather than later. Claudia and Gerardo are excellent people to know and love. They do a great job of loving Bogart and me. They are patient, very gracious and kind.

I had a major Philippines flashback Saturday. Gerardo, Claudia and Juan Pablo took a five day course. 4 days were via Zoom and Saturday was an all day review, finishing modules of the course and it concluded with their graduation held at Casa de Dios. I had to attend with them Saturday and the Philippines flashback came when it was time for the seminar attendees to take their group photo and in true Philippines fashion I was invited to be a part of the photo! Only heaven knows how many group photos of me are floating around Southeast Asia. I guess that was the kickoff for Mexico. I smiled brightly and showed as many of my white, straight teeth that I paid a small fortune and endured 2 oral surgeries and 3 years and two months of pain for!!! 😊

“My 3rd and last Sunday at Casa de Dios-Queretaro for this trip” Juan Pablo(Claudia’s youngest son), Gerardo, Claudia and me. 😊

We are still in need of one time gifts and/or monthly financial partnership and it's never too late to join us in that. Love, Sherika and Bogart.

FIRE MEXICO AND CASA DE DIOS

I am so blessed to be a member of two amazing teams and have them meet and collaborate so well, as one, for the Kingdom of God! Karyn led us in the most awesome times of worship! Andy gave us heavenly wisdom about street evangelism and everyone supported me Sunday morning as I preached! God is on the move here in Queretaro and we are very grateful. We are also hungry for more. Please keep Casa de Dios in prayer as we're just a baby church right now but we are seeing heaven invade earth as we seek the Lord for His heart for this fellowship. I've been here almost three weeks and I go back to Guadalajara tomorrow, April 2 but I will be back to Queretaro soon to continue the work that I am called to here with Casa de Dios!!
