

THE PHILIPPINES

My time in The Philippines is flying by! Over the past few months, I have been busy doing various things. I help with school, where I'm learning how hard it is to teach English, lol. I have a couple of shifts a month at the Hope House, and I have shifts at the mamas and boys house, where I read a lot of books to our 4 and 5 year old boys.

Something fun we have been doing is training to hike Mt. Apo, which is the highest mountain in the Philippines. This past week, a group of 36 of us, took on the challenge and we spent 3 days hiking Mt. Apo. My favorite part was seeing the girls conquer it. They were so excited and proud of themselves. Once we reached the top, we spent time praying for The Philippines and declaring scripture over the people and the land.

However, while the hike was an incredible experience, my favorite moments are the one on one conversations with the girls. When they ask me questions, we talk about life and Jesus, we laugh, we cry. Those are the moments that I love the most and that I will always cherish.
