

1. Considering the very small acknowledgement of Samuel's death, how might it affect us if we were more diligent to think, "He must increase, but I must decrease."
2. How might a Christian's definition of foolishness differ from how people typically identify a fool in our society?
3. If you were in David's shoes, needing to turn away from a particular sin, what parts of Abigail's plea to David in verses 28-31 would be most helpful/persuasive to you?
4. What is the doctrine of God's restraining grace?
5. Considering the three main characters, Nabal, Abigail, and David; how can we understand them as pictures of who we are and who we should strive to be?
