

Surviving Family
Week Two Study Guide
Living Out Your Mission and Values

Main Point: The way you live and what you value dictates what you pass on to the next generation.

1. Name some values that were passed down to you. Before you pass anything on, you need to settle your mission in life.
 - What is your life mission?
 - If you do not have one, what do you value that can help form your mission?
2. Whenever you begin to place boundaries in your life, do not be surprised when you face opposition.
 - In what ways have you been tempted to live outside of your boundaries?
3. Christ was always inviting people to join Him on His mission. While you are living out your mission, create an invite culture.
 - How are you inviting others to participate in something greater than them?
4. While you are living out your mission, you need to clearly define your values.
 - How are your values demonstrated through the way you live?
 - What are five values you would want to pass down to the next generation?
Take some time to write them down.
5. Christ lived out His mission and values with His disciples daily... perfectly. While you are living out your mission and values, live them out consistently.
 - In what ways are you consistent in living out your mission and values; at home, work and everyday life?
 - What do you face that tempts you to live inconsistently?
6. Disciples carry on and pass on what they are passionate about and believe because they had tasted and seen...
 - How do you share your testimony through your mission and values to those around you?

7. Two values you should adopt into your mission are: generosity and serving.
- Be generous in your praise (speak well of one another & others at home), worship (at church and at home), giving (honor the Lord in your tithe), and expression of love to others.
 - Serve in the church, community and globally because it's who you are, not what you do.

So what do you do from here?

- Take time and analyze what your values are, what you want to pass down, and write them down.
- Serve alongside your family: your spouse, your kids, parents, and grandparents.
- Strategize and pray to be more intentional in how you live and pass along your values to those around you.
