

LITERATUS LINGUA

MRS. WEIDER

Grammar/ Literature

This week scholars will finish Chapter 5 and take the Chapter 5 assessment. This chapter has focused on pronouns, noun jobs, and noun characteristics

In literature, we will work on the Not So Serious play, discuss story elements from Julius Caesar, and consider whether the conspirators should have killed/assassinated Caesar. Though the classes picked the "issue", each scholar will have the opportunity to advance their own thesis. The scholars will either choose the affirmative: The conspirators should have killed Caesar; OR the negative: The conspirators should not have killed Caesar.

Poetry and Short Stories

Two forms of writing we do not get to as often as I would like are poetry and short stories. I like to make that part of the lead up to Christmas or to Easter or other breaks because it generally does not require a large amount of classroom time, but the enjoyment of poetry and short stories is palpable for the scholars.

This week we will read poems by Shakespeare, Frost, Longfellow, and Rosetti. We will also read one of my favorite short stories by O. Henry, "The Gift of the Magi".

I pray that all of our families will take the time this Christmas to meditate on the incarnation of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. When He came he opened the path to Heaven for us all. Thanks be to God!

Support the Logic School Building!

This week I had a special opportunity to look at color possibilities for the cabinetry in the NEW Logic School Building! While I did not choose anything myself, I was excited that the building is moving along! Of course, the structure and the cabinetry is just the beginning. Scholars need chairs to sit in, desks upon which to write, and teachers need the tools of their trade, too (desks, whiteboards, etc.). Please consider supporting this project by adding to the fund to furnish a classroom. This building- and all of the materials inside of it- will bless the entire community!
