Seventh Literature

"The Tell-Tale Heart"
by Edgar Allan Poe

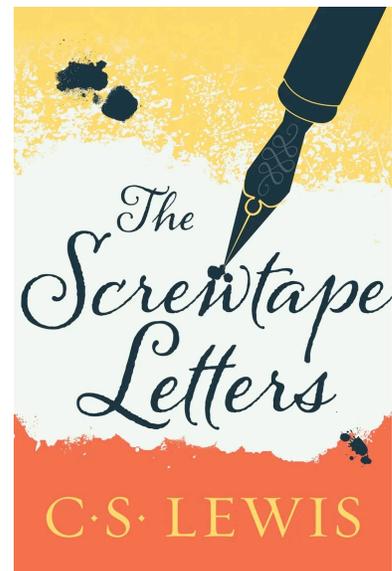

"The Tell-Tale Heart" short story is very fun to read in class; we like to turn the lights off while reading Poe. The old man's "Vulture Eye" leaves the narrator no choice but to murder him. The narrator attempts to hid the body under the floor boards, but his guilt gets the better of him. The disturbing story of a man's guilt used Tropes and Schemes that we get to study and discuss.

Eighth Literature

The Screwtape Letters by C.S. Lewis

The fourth letter of The Screwtape Letters was about Prayer. Screwtape advises Wormwood to keep the patient from prayer as much as possible. If the patient does pray, Screwtape's advise is that Wormwood have the patient rely on his childlike parrot prayers or inward prayers that just help the patient feel like he's praying. Luckily, no matter how pathetic our prayers, God promises to listen.

Seventh Grade Progym

The Seventh Graders are moving on to Narratives. We discussed the Nine Narrative Components that all stories need: Recognition, Reversal, Suffering, Agents, Action, Time, Place, Manner, and Cause. We are working on our own retelling of The Good Samaritan.

Eighth Grade Progym

The Eighth Graders next Chreia is a Historical Chreia that will explain a quote from a historical figure of their choice. Using our chreia essay format we will attempt to explain our understanding of the interesting quote.

Neither the life of an individual nor the history of a society can be understood without understanding both.
