OUTDOOR LEARNING

It's Qq week, so we talked about quartz, and looked at my rock collection. We watched a short video on igneous, sedimentary, and metamorphic rocks. We talked about how rocks are different in other locations around the world. We played a "hot potato" type game with the rocks. We walked around campus in search of different types of rocks, then came back to the room and tried to match our newfound rocks to the ones in my collection. No one found quartz on campus – aw, snap.

SCIENCE

We have been watching our caterpillars transform into their chrysalis. We carefully transferred them from the jar to the net habitat. We discussed the life cycle and completed a sequencing activity.
