

LITERATUS LINGUA

MRS. WEIDER

Grammar/ Literature

This week scholars will continue Chapter 3 in Shurley English. We will be completing several practice opportunities in order to solidify our knowledge of prepositions and prepositional phrases.

In literature, we are pushing on with Julius Caesar. Thanks to the generosity of the OSL administration, I am giving each student their own copy of Julius Caesar. We will discuss how to “make a book our own” and scholars will have many chances to write in and engage with the play.

How To Mark a Book

As noted before, scholars will be given their very own copy of Julius Caesar. This will give us a wonderful opportunity to engage even more deeply with our reading. Here are some basic instructions for engaging and marking in a book. I would encourage you to look in your child's book as we go along and then ask them questions about what they like or what they find interesting, etc.

1. Circle unfamiliar words
2. Box character names
3. Underline important passages
4. Put an * asterisk near main ideas or plot developments
5. Use a question mark to indicate confusing ideas or parts that need further questioning.
