THOUGHTS ON THE JOURNEY

Our greatest potential is found in a life fully surrendered to Christ. However, our human nature challenges us to find meaning and purpose everywhere except in the Lord. We must make it our goal to push back against that temptation and submit to our Lord.

“We must also know that in order to stand up against such a great temptation, we are going to have to meet it with equal or greater force.”

When I think about the pressures that we face as it relates to disobedience, they are great. We must recognize that we are under assault daily. From social media, to the television, to the general societal expectations – all of them push us in an opposite direction from that which we should be going. Simply recognizing this fact is helpful.

We must also know that in order to stand up against such a great temptation, we are going to have to meet it with equal or greater force. We must find a way to keep the will of God before us. We can do this in obvious ways like reading the Bible and spending time in prayer. But, we can also make use of the great resources that are available to us thanks to the internet and podcast. What are you sowing into your life? Remember, what we sow is what we will reap.

One of the greatest resources we have at our disposal is that of relationship. We need to intentionally put ourselves in relationship with like minded people. These people can hold us accountable, they can pray for us, they can give us advice, and they can help us to journey well in general.

Take a moment and assess your life. Are you truly walking with the Lord? Or, are you guilty of forsaking Him? The greatest call in our life is to walk in faithfulness to Him. If we will walk in this way, then we will see what God can truly do with our lives.

Honored to be your pastor,
