Week two - "Life on the Margin"

Genesis 11:1-9 and Psalm 23

Bottom line: Margin isn't optional, and it isn't accidental, but it is necessary.

1. How would you describe the amount of margin you currently have in your life? How does it compare to other seasons of your life?
2. Think of someone you would consider calm and/or present. What makes them seem that way to you? In other words, what does it look like and feel like when someone is "present"?
3. How do you struggle to be present in various situations?
4. Read Genesis 11:1-9
 - a. The people thought they could build their own way to God and work hard enough to get there. In what ways do you identify with their thought process and efforts?
 - b. What was the fear that was driving them? How does their fear translate to you?
 - c. God scatters the people geographically and linguistically. How could this be considered a gift instead of a punishment?
5. How does your life suffer because of information overload? How could you potentially focus more if you knew less?
6. What are some of the no's you've said, or need to say, to create more margin in your life?
7. What are some of the best yes's you need to say in this season of your life?
8. How can the group pray for you this week as you try to figure out and hear the Spirit's guidance on your margins?
