EPIPHANY SUNDAY

e·piph·a·ny

/ə'pifənē/

noun

the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles as represented by the Magi (Matthew 2:1–12).

- the festival commemorating the Epiphany on January 6.
- a manifestation of a divine or supernatural being.

Friday, Jan. 5th is the 12th Day of Christmas. Saturday, Jan. 6th is Epiphany when we commemorate the “manifestation of Christ.” Sunday, Jan. 7th, is Epiphany Sunday when HighPoint will recognize Theophany, or Three Kings' Day, a Christian feast day celebrating the revelation of God incarnate as Jesus Christ.

“The Blessing of the Lord be upon you this Advent Season, believe & receive what He desires to birth in you for His Glory!”

What has Christ birthed (or is birthing) in you?

How has Jesus Christ been made known in your life this season?

The background is a warm, golden-orange sunset sky filled with small, twinkling stars. In the foreground, there are dark silhouettes of a desert landscape, including rolling hills, a small hut with a thatched roof, and several palm trees. On the left, two camels are silhouetted against the bright sky, with riders on their backs. In the center, a dark, rectangular sign with a white border is tilted slightly. The sign contains the text "Do not forsake meeting together..." in a white, elegant, cursive font. A large, bright starburst is visible in the upper right corner of the sky.

A motivational poster with a white border is centered in a desert landscape. The poster has a dark, textured background with the text "I AM HOPEFULLY OPTIMISTIC!" in white, serif, all-caps font. The text is arranged in three lines: "I AM" on the top line, "HOPEFULLY" on the middle line, and "OPTIMISTIC!" on the bottom line. There are small, faint star-like symbols on the poster's background. The landscape features silhouettes of two people riding camels on the left, palm trees on the right, and a small hut with a thatched roof in the distance. The sky is a warm orange and yellow gradient with a bright starburst in the upper right and scattered small stars. The foreground shows rolling hills, with a dark blue, rocky mound on the left.
