What are some common ways that you think we cheap out on our character?

“When it comes to developing our character, it’s not the thought that counts. It’s the thought that turns into effort that leads to action that counts.”

Why do you think we often struggle to put in the effort and action?

Cheap character breaks.
How can you put in the effort and action to create a strong character? What does that strong character you’re imagining look like?

Do a Cost-Benefit Analysis on one decision you often have to make when it comes to developing your character.
What are the costs and what are the benefits of putting in the effort and action?
