SERMON NOTES

Take a Chance

In a world that rarely plays fair, Ecclesiastes 11 invites us to live as if it does—casting our bread upon the waters with radical generosity and sowing kindness without certainty of return. This sermon explores the tension between wisdom and risk, urging us to give boldly, love deeply, and act faithfully even when the outcomes are unclear. As we reflect on the Teacher's poetic counsel and the bittersweet beauty of life's dark days, we're reminded that our legacy is shaped not by perfect timing, but by persistent grace. Join us as we prepare for the final chapter by embracing a life of open-handed trust and joyful remembrance.

Questions for Reflection:

1.In what areas of your life are you tempted to “observe the wind” instead of sowing? What fears or uncertainties hold you back from acting generously or faithfully?

1.What are some “days of darkness” in your life that, in hindsight, shaped who you are today? How might you begin to honor those seasons rather than hide them?

EN ESPAÑOL

Aprovecha La Oportunidad

En un mundo que rara vez juega limpio, Eclesiastés 11 nos invita a vivir como si lo hiciera, echando nuestro pan sobre las aguas con generosidad radical y sembrando bondad sin certeza de obtener algo a cambio. Este sermón explora la tensión entre la sabiduría y el riesgo, instándonos a dar con valentía, amar profundamente y actuar con fidelidad incluso cuando los resultados no están claros. Al reflexionar sobre el consejo poético del Maestro y la belleza agri dulce de los días oscuros de la vida, recordamos que nuestro legado no está determinado por el momento perfecto, sino por la gracia persistente. Acompáñenos mientras nos preparamos para el capítulo final, abrazando una vida de confianza generosa y recuerdos alegres.
