Justice and Peacemaking in the Age of Outrage

Join us for a new fall series!

We live in an age of outrage. Our politics divide us, our social media feeds reward anger and our culture often tells us that the path to change comes through winning, shaming and defeating the other side. Even the church can be shaped by the same forces.

But Jesus offers us another way.

This fall, The Jesus Way explores what it means to follow Christ into the beautiful and difficult work of justice and peacemaking. Jesus does not call us to ignore injustice or retreat from the brokenness of the world. He calls us to become people who pursue what is right without becoming consumed by resentment, who speak truth without contempt and who work for reconciliation without pretending our differences and wounds don't matter.
