†AFFIRMATION OF FAITH

The Apostles' Creed

I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, and in Jesus Christ his only Son our Lord; who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead and buried; he descended into hell; the third day he rose again from the dead; he ascended into heaven and sitteth on the right hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead. I believe in the Holy Ghost; the holy catholic church; the communion of saints; the forgiveness of sins; the resurrection of the body; and the life everlasting. Amen.

Hello Highlanders,

As I thought about what to share with you as we stand at the precipice of (yet another) Lenten season, my mind kept being drawn to an article I recently read. In the article, a religion reporter - who labels himself 'unsure of his faith', was asked why he makes it a point to always attend a service on Ash Wednesday. His response stuck with me for days and, I hope, will serve as a powerful reminder of why we participate in Lent and as an invitation to our services on Wednesday. I think the answer has to do with the radical and disorienting nature of the observance. Our consumer culture promises that attractiveness and eternal youth are just one purchase away. Cash or credit. But Ash Wednesday reminds us we are dead in our sins and, soon enough, dead in fact. Ashes to ashes, dust to dust.

There is a strong tendency in American churches to suppose that Christianity condemns other people's corrupt values, but never our own. Easily available, grace becomes cheap. Ash Wednesday subverts the Sunday-best facade many wear to church every week and the happy-clappy shallowness they find there.

To the degree that sin is even a relevant cultural category at all, it is almost completely subjective. And sin, if it even exists, is something other people do. Yet the Ash Wednesday liturgy recalls memorable lines from Psalm 51: "My sin is ever before me." It feels strange to recall my own sins and the manifold social evils in which I am complicit. Is there something rebellious and wicked in my very nature? On Ash Wednesday, I am forced to confront those parts of myself.

Many Catholics and liturgical Protestants attend services in the morning or at noon. The ashen crosses on their foreheads bear silent but compelling witness to their faith. In secular Washington, D.C., a town obsessed with power and status, the ashes are welcome reminders that many people still lead quiet lives of devotion. Ultimately, they acknowledge, they have no power over nature. Ultimately, they are dust.

I prefer an Ash Wednesday service in the evening. I don't feel quite worthy to wear the sign of the cross on my forehead, supposing it to be more appropriate for people with stronger faith and more active devotion.

But even I can approach the altar on Ash Wednesday, suspending for a moment my speculations about what parts of religion are true and what parts are illusions. Even if I do not finally know what Jesus can do about it or how, it feels right to acknowledge my sin, my incompleteness, and my mortality.

For all my childhood years of going to church to hear that God loves me, it seems worth remembering that "the wages of sin is death" (Romans 6:23). Church cannot just be a place to have my ideological views, my consumer preferences, or my lifestyle choices affirmed. It should also be, in the words of a Catholic priest during the Civil War, "one clean spot on earth, uncontaminated by politics, where every sinner may bow his proud head before God."

And so I will bow my head. I will receive the cross of ashes and hear the words, "Repent, and believe the gospel." Of course, the meaning of the gospel has confounded the philosophers of the ages. And yet it is so simple, even a child can understand: Jesus "came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." (1 Timothy 1:15).

I will leave the church in silent contemplation, then go to my home and wash the ashes off my forehead. And I will be vividly aware, for one day at least, that my immortality and righteousness are actually illusions, while my finitude and sin are very real.

I will credit the church, so fashionably and widely accused of trafficking in delusions, with telling me the truth. For the message of Ash Wednesday is indisputable: I am a sinner, and I will die.

And in the penitent days of Lent, my skeptical heart will wonder what other truths the church may possess.

I hope you will join us on Ash Wednesday as we begin our Lenten journey together.

Sharing God's Love,

~Chip

Catechism

Dear Parents of Highland Fifth Graders and everyone else who has missed out in the past few years!!!!

Highland Presbyterian is preparing to offer the study of Children's Catechism beginning Sunday, March 5th during the Second Mile or 11:00 service after the children's message. We will meet every Sunday in the kid's choir room next to mission central.

If you have further questions or your child plans to participate, feel free to call Jen (989) 447-3489. This is a meaningful family experience, and we hope your family will be a part of it.

Notes on Today's Music...

"I Will Greatly Rejoice" (Isaiah 61) is a jubilant expression of praise! The "alleluias" of this celebrative introit will soon give way to the contemplative music of Lent beginning on Ash Wednesday.

"Alleluia! Sing to Jesus!" is a glorious hymn of praise in which the author invites us to declare Christ's continued presence among his people. Accompanied by handbells and organ, let us sing "alleluia!" to the ever-present Christ.

"The One" is an effective choral meditation during the serving of communion elements. It is Jesus' invitation to the table presented with simple clarity. "The One who knows your name has bid you, 'Come.'"

"Amazing Grace" is a handbell arrangement of this 200-year-old hymn. The tune for this hymn is an early American melody. Highland Ringers would love to have all bells ringing!

"Lift High the Cross" makes clear that the cross is a symbol of Christ's love. Written in 1887 as a processional hymn for Winchester Cathedral, it didn't find its way to America until 1974. It is a Highland favorite!

"Holy, Holy, Holy Lord" (Sanctus) is a liturgical setting of an ancient text. There are five settings: Kyrie, Gloria, Credo, Sanctus, and Agnus Dei. The Sanctus is a joyful shout of thanks and praise to God.

OPENING PRAYER AND LORD'S PRAYER

HYMN #144

Alleluia! Sing to Jesus

CALL TO CONFESSION

PRAYER OF CONFESSION

All: God of calling, you called Abraham and Matthew and gave them the strength they needed to follow you. You also called a people and cared for and nurtured that people so that they could live life in your abundance. You also call us, but sometimes we prefer to close our eyes and cover our ears, turning our backs to your will. Forgive us, O God, and grant us the confidence and the hope that we need to follow when you call. Amen.

ASSURANCE OF PARDON

PASSING THE PEACE

One: The peace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all

All: And also with you.
