1. How can you tell when someone is finding their identity in their work rather than in Christ?
2. Trabelus shared a great picture of how God provides our food through people working jobs that often go unnoticed or undervalued. What are some other ways we experience God's grace through the everyday work of others?
3. Thinking about God's provision, what are some of the macro (large) and micro (small) ways He provides for you personally?
4. Why do you think it's so easy for us to overlook the value of work, even our own?
5. Read Colossians 3:23. After reading this verse, how might your perspective on work shift if you truly saw everything you do as being for the Lord?
6. The message concluded with a call to surrender our identity, value, and integrity to God. Which of these areas do you feel God is inviting you to surrender more fully today?
