

Walking in the Light

1 John 1:5-10 // John Corrigan // 1.3.21

We have begun a new year! One of the greatest joys of belonging to Jesus' church is the shared life we have with God and one another. John talks about this fellowship in his first letter. This Sunday as we look at 1 John 1:5-10, we will see that God is light, who illuminates our path, and forgives and cleanses us from sin. Join us as we start this year out with some good news!

Read 1 John 1:5-10

Here is a summary of our passage:

God is light. We can walk in God's light and be cleansed from all unrighteousness, if we confess the sins that His light reveals.

From this passage, what truth is most meaningful to you? What do these verses teach you about God? What do these verses teach you about yourself and others?

Do you regularly confess your sins to God? How/When do you do this? Do you intentionally set aside time to let God reveal any darkness that might be in your heart and mind? How can you improve in this area?

When we walk in God's light, we are opening ourselves up to God and others. How have you found this vulnerability to be liberating and empowering (even in the midst of how intimidating it can feel)?

Reading Suggestion for this week: 1 John chapters 1-5!
