L "Bearing one another's burdens."
T This is how Paul defines the principle of Christian community (Gal 6:1-4). It is a wonderfully practical, richly theological, and very surprising definition. Let me share some ways that I have seen our church fulfill this calling—
F Several people are gifted at approaching those who feel alone. Many contribute to the maintenance of our building.
E Some provide counseling for individuals, couples, and families.

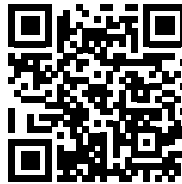

People defend each other.
They have certainly encouraged me.
New friendships formed.
Lots of giving to missions and budgets.
Partnering with those in a time of loss or grief.
In general, being available to help wherever needed.
Sharing insights.
Choosing charity over judgment. Telling a joke at just the right time.
Watching kids. Loving kids. Transporting kids. Teaching kids.
Listening.
Helping each other move houses and furniture.
Keeping communication open between younger and older generations.
Praying for each other.
Bearing with one another's quirks.
Clearing up relationships.
Substitute teaching or serving. People working on security.
Teaching.
Showing understanding and empathy, but also holding accountable.
Taking vacations together. Vacuuming after an event so others don't have to.
Volunteering.
Did I mention watching kids?
Setting up and tearing down for Christmas and other holidays.
Youth projects.
Encouraging naps (zzz).
Granted, there is a lot more to mention. A lot more good things, and some areas that I, at least, could improve on. But I am feeling so thankful this weekend—thankful, supported, and encouraged. I wanted to share some of the reasons why and pray that you would feel encouraged, too. We're a family, and we bear one another's burdens.
