Mid-Week Devotion

(Take time this week to pray & respond to the following)

So many things in life demand more time, worry, and effort than they deserve. It is exceedingly easy to get caught up in conquests, indulgences, and conflicts. How tragic it is that these errors in judgment rob us of joy that comes from walking with Jesus and sharing His love with others. There is an ever-present temptation to devote ourselves to inconsequential things at the expense of relationships. God's Word reminds us that life is a gift, it is fleeting, and it is a privilege to have a place and purpose in His plan. How we live matters. It matters more than we often consciously acknowledge.

Showing Jesus is a vital part of the Great Commission. You can show Jesus to your family, neighbors, coworkers, classmates and even strangers. By listening to them, loving them, and serving them, you create opportunities to share the Gospel. When people see Jesus in us, some of them will want to understand how they can have the hope and security God gives to His people. If you really want to change this world for the better, you need to wield the power of God. Only the power of God can push back the evil and rescue sinners from Hell. Do not think of yourself as weak and inconsequential. God has been working through weak, small, powerless, and imperfect people throughout all of history. In His will and with His power, you are unstoppable.

When was the last time you got excited about your faith? When was the last time you thoughtfully appreciated all that God gave you when He received you into His family? Don't you want others to know and experience this joy and freedom as well?

Prayerfully consider how much or little Jesus is visible in your life. Invite the Holy Spirit to invigorate your faith and enthusiasm for glorifying God through humble acts of grace. Commit to be the ambassador of the Gospel God has called you to be.
