

Dream About Russia and Alaska

In the dream I and Michelle traveled to Alaska to the western outskirts of it and we visited certain villages and towns there. I saw the name SHIAN and heard the words SHIAN land while looking at an old map.

I looked it up and found the Tsimshian people of Alaska. Historically they look like native Indian people. In the dream they looked like white Europeans now.

In the dream I traveled to the lands and walked through rural areas where the population was very low and infrastructure was still very old. Any nearby town centers were very bland and old very low levels of foot traffic, very low commerce, and the town center was missing vibrancy. Even the colors within the small town center were faded.

We also visited a home that was very low tech and old tech. The language of the locals was different. It was Alaska but felt like 1940s America.

There was a small airport that the President's plane flew from. But he didn't take air force 1. He took a smaller private jet plane to go there.

There is a military or federal base there. Within the base, there is a zone that crosses over between the US portion and the Russia portion of land. That zone is a neutral zone to be kept clear of all weaponry and personnel. But it is an official crossing point.

I saw US personnel scrambling to evacuate that zone as to not be on [new] Russian soil.

In the dream we were leaving Alaska by road on the same day that the President was leaving. That's where I saw his jet pass us on the highway as it took off from the Alaskan airport. This is how I saw it wasn't Air Force 1. It was a smaller plane with the presidential decals on it.

The people of Alaska were in turmoil to hear that a large portion of their state would now be occupied by Russia. I saw local news reports in confusion as they were trying to determine which towns and regions would fall under the new demarcation lines of Russia. It was a large chunk of the state carved it as illustrated on the annotated map. The mainland towards the East was in an uproar and angry with the President for doing this deal with Putin to acquire or reacquire this land. Essentially bringing Russia to our doorstep.

I shared the dream with Michelle and she researched that Alaska was purchased from Russia in the 1860s. So it appears that a portion of it will be sold back.

There was much contention over who knew what and when as local mayors were not notified and Alaska residents were not told and the locals weren't privy to the plans.
