When a Global Issue is Very Personal

by Hilario Pardo, Global Missions Pastor

I am often confronted with global crises: human trafficking, extreme poverty, orphans and refugees are familiar words in my life and my vocabulary. For many years, Northshore has approached these situations with compassion, grace, and generosity reflecting the heart of Christ's teachings.

At times these global crises touch the heart of many for a week or two, and then, as situations change with new crises, new natural disasters, new wars and new famines, we tend to lose focus of what moved our hearts the prior week.

While we cannot solve the problems of the whole world, we can still touch the lives of specific individuals whom the Lord puts in our path. We can do that here at home and anywhere in the world.
