Building a Legacy in India

by Hilario Pardo

As we walked down the hill of the compound in India, my eyes were full of tears, seeing what the generosity of the people of Northshore had accomplished.

Just minutes before, our team of seventeen people from Northshore arrived here to celebrate the opening of this new building with an eye-opening experience. Near the entry of the Living Water Compound, a multitude of people had gathered to sacrifice a goat as an offering to a rock painted orange that they call god. As the gate was closed, a beautiful building full of peace, joy, and majesty stood in front of our eyes. What a contrast with the turmoil and despair, the violence and the anguish of people who were trying to do their best to appease and please an idol...
